APPENDIX ONE: OVERVIEW OF LOCAL DEMOGRAPHIC, ECONOMIC AND MARKET CONDITIONS

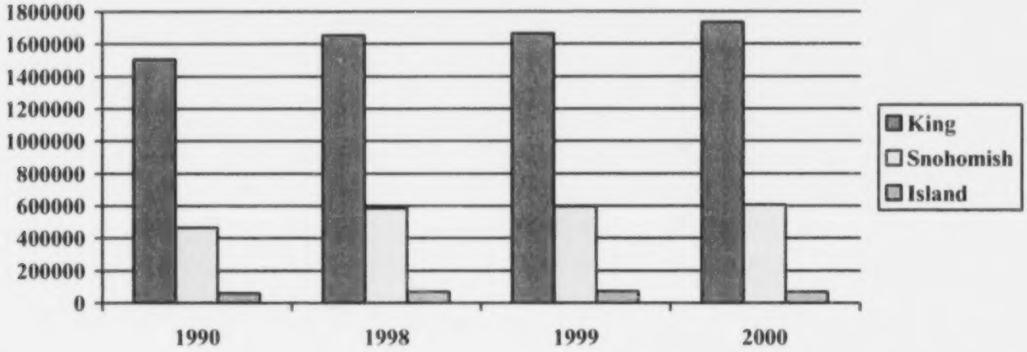
1.0 DEMOGRAPHY

1.1 TOTAL METROPOLITAN POPULATION

The Seattle Primary Metropolitan Statistical Area includes communities of various sizes ranging from small towns to the City of Seattle (located in King County). The population of the Seattle Market Area by county for 1990 and the last three years is shown below:

Figure 1

Population of Seattle Market Area



Source: www.census.gov/population/estimates/county/co-99-1/99C1_17txt for 1998 and 1999
Source: U.S. Census Bureau, Census 2000 for 1990 and 2000

As shown above, the highest population can be found in King County. The Seattle Market Area made up 40.9% of the total population of the State of Washington in 2000. The percentage of each county in the Seattle Market Area and its recent growth rate is shown below.

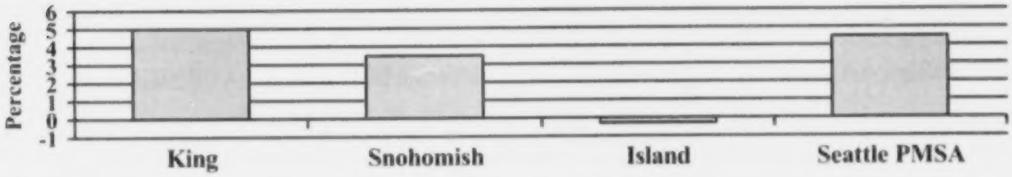
Figure 3

Rate of Population Growth by County, 1999-2000, Seattle Market Area



Source: Calculations by The Starr Group Inc. based on the Census

As shown above, major population areas such as the City of Seattle (King County) have the highest population in the Seattle Market Area, as well as the fastest growth rate in recent years. Between 1998 and 2000 King County grew at a slightly faster rate than the overall growth rate of 4.5%. Rate of population growth was considerably higher in this area between 1990 and 2000 when the overall growth rate was 18.8%. During this period Snohomish County was the fastest growing area (30.1%), followed by Island County (18.9%) and King County (15.2%).

The population growth rate for each county in the Seattle Market Area over the past 10 years is shown below.

The forecasted population growth in the Seattle Market Area for 2015 is shown below, compared to actual population for the year 2000.

The information provided above is explained in further detail in the following charts which show the forecasted growth rates for the next 5, 10 and 15 years. The expected average growth rate for these five-year periods is 3.9%, 5.7% and 6.0% respectively. The highest growth rates are forecasted for Snohomish and Island Counties.

As shown above all counties are forecasted to have population increases during this time period with the highest growth rates expected in Island and Snohomish Counties. The above information also demonstrates that the highest growth period will be between 2010 and 2015, with a forecasted increase of 6.0%.

1.2 HOUSEHOLDS

The total number of households in the Seattle Market Area closely reflects the number of dwelling units in the area.

The largest rate changes have been seen in Snohomish County, with the smallest rate increase in King County. However, because the population of King County is larger than the other counties, as expected, it has the highest increase in the total number of households.

The forecasted increase in the number of households for the period from 2001 to 2006 is shown below.

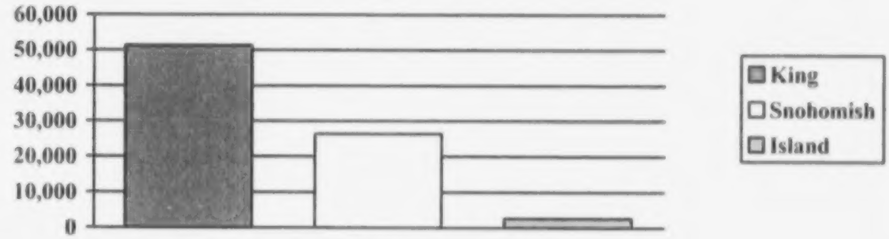
Forecasted Increase in Number of Households, 2001-2006, Seattle Market Area



Source: U.S. Census Bureau, 2000

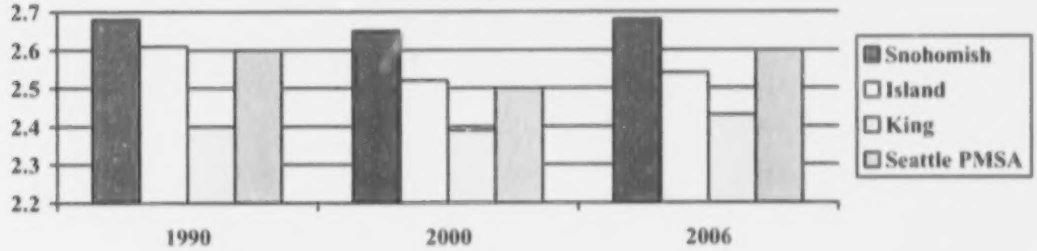
As shown above, the number of additional households in the Seattle area to the year 2006 is forecast to be highest in King County, followed by Snohomish County. In total, it is expected that approximately 80,000 new households will be added to the Seattle Market Area to the year 2006.

The average household size has changed over the past 10 years. The changes in average household size for each county over the last 10 years are shown below, as well as the forecasted change to the year 2006.

Figure 10

Changes in Average Household Size, 1990, 2000 and 2006, Seattle Market Area



Source: U.S. Census Bureau, Census 2000
Source: http://factfinder.census.gov/

This information is useful in determining the number of bedrooms required for each household, and therefore impacts on the size of housing units. As shown above, the counties with the highest number of persons per household projected for 2006 are Snohomish and Island. As a result, using an average minimum of one bedroom per member in the household, the majority of the new housing units in these two counties could be expected to be in the range of three or more bedrooms.

Another way to look at the housing requirements for a household is to determine the composition of the household, including number of children or seniors in the household. The following chart provides information on the types of households in 2000 in the Seattle Market Area.

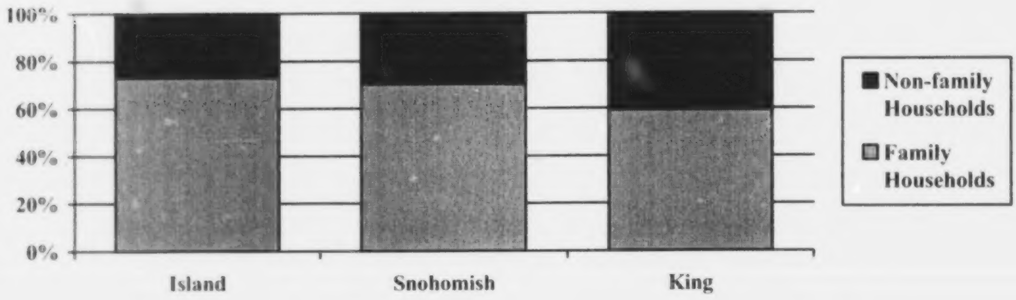
% of Total Households by Household Type, Seattle Market Area, 2000

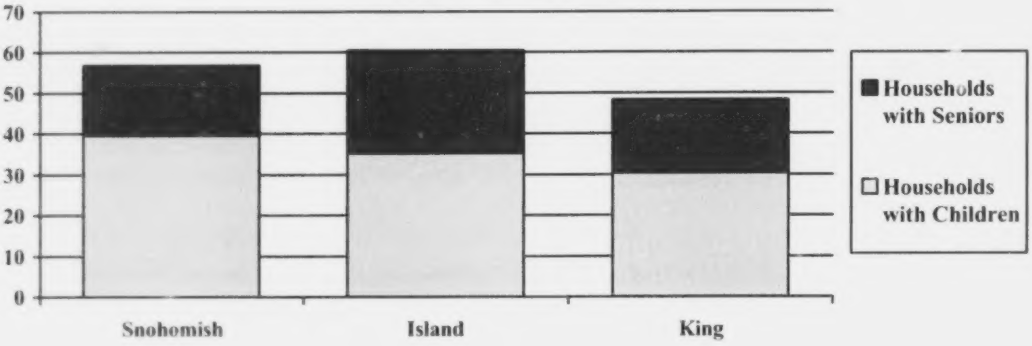


Source: U.S. Census Bureau, Census 2000
Source: http://factfinder.census.gov/

The above chart shows that Island and Snohomish Counties have the highest number of "family" households, or persons that are related to one another sharing a dwelling. King County has the highest percentage of households whose members were not related to one another.

Figure 12

Percentage of Total Households with Seniors or with Children, Seattle Market Area, 2000



Source: U.S. Census Bureau, Census 2000
Source: http://factfinder.census.gov/

As shown above, the highest percentages of non-family households are found in King County, which also have the lowest percentages of households with children. Households with children make up over 35% of the households in Snohomish and Island Counties. The highest percentage of households with seniors is found in Island County (25.2%).

The study undertaken for CMHC on the US home renovation market[1] found that homeowners in the age 35-44 category were most likely to undertake renovation projects, as these households included the highest number of children under 18. Homeowners over age 65 were least likely to renovate.

1.3 TENURE

The tenure of the dwelling influences the type of renovation or new construction. Owners have been found to spend significantly more on renovations than landlords of rental properties. In 1990, an average of 63.6% of the dwellings were owned, compared to 65.9% in 2000. The percentage of owners is expected to increase to an average of 68.3% in 2006.

Source: EASI Demographics, 2001 for 2006

The pattern of ownership versus rental has increased overall over the past 10 years, and is forecast to continue at a steady pace throughout the Seattle Market Area as illustrated below. In all Counties the number of owners exceeds the number of renters and this ratio is expected to continue.

Source: U.S. Census Bureau, Census 1990 and 2000
Source: http://factfinder.census.gov/
Source: EASI Demographics, 2001 for 2006

The most significant changes in tenure have occurred in Island County, where the percentage of homeowners increased by 4.5% between 1990-2000, and is expected to increase by another 3.2% from 2000-2006. The trend in home ownership is expected to rise in all counties in the Seattle Market Area.

The report entitled "Renovation in the United States; Market Overview and Contact Guide"[2] stated, "rental property owners often have different motives for remodelling than do homeowners. Homeowners both invest and live in their homes. They remodel to personally benefit from the changes and to protect and improve the value of their investment. Rental owners remodel primarily to maximize their economic return and protect their investment."

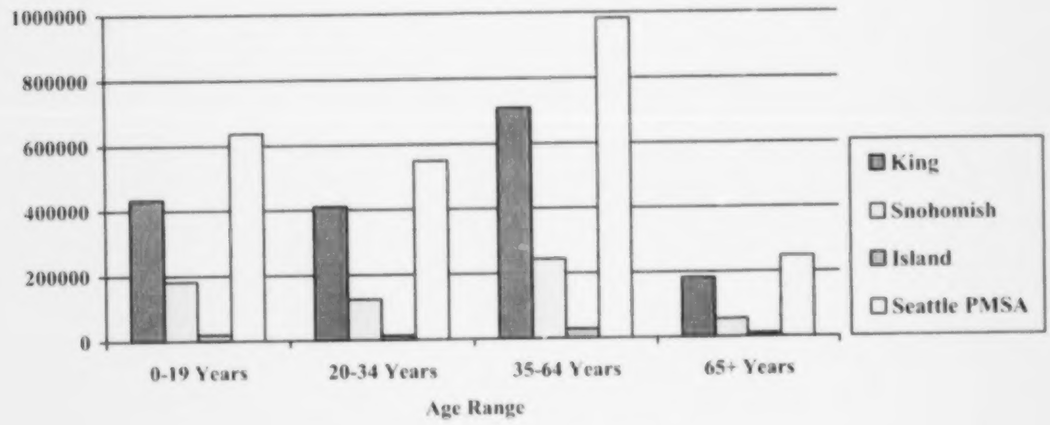
1.4 AGE GROUPS

The current population by main age groups for the Seattle Market Area is shown below.

Figure 15

Population by Age Range, Seattle Market Area, 2000



Source: U.S. Census Bureau, http://factfinder.census.gov

The county with the highest percentage of residents age 0-19 years is Snohomish (30%), followed by Island County (27.9%). King County had the lowest percentage of residents in this age group, at only 25%, compared to the Seattle Market Area average of 26.4%. For adults aged 20-34 years, King County showed the highest percentage at 23.7%, compared to the Seattle Market Area average of 22.7%. In comparison, the percentage of adults aged 20-34 years in Snohomish County was 20.5% and in Island County 18.9%.

Adults aged 35-64 years make up the largest age group in the Seattle Market Area, accounting for 40.7% of the total population. The county with the highest population in this age group was King (40.8%), closely followed by Snohomish County (40.3%) and Island County (38.9%).

Adults over age 65 made up 10.2% of the total population. There are significantly more seniors in Island County (14.3%) than in King County (10.5%) or Snohomish County (9.1%).

The median age range for the Seattle Market Area by county is shown below. The highest median age range is seen in Island County at 37.0 years, with Snohomish showing the lowest median age range of 34.7 years. The number of children and seniors in the population influences these median age ranges. Island County had the highest representation by seniors in their general population; Snohomish had the highest percentage of children making up their population.

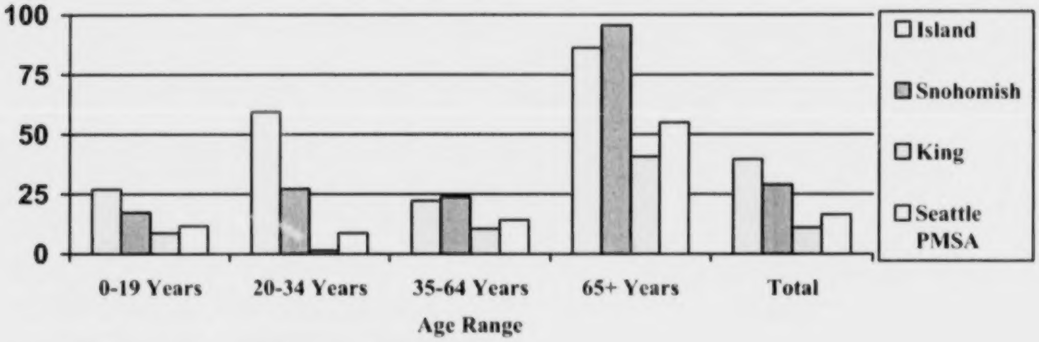
Figure 20

Forecasted % Change in Population by Age Group between 2000 and 2015, Seattle Market Area



Source: http://www.wa.gov/esd/lmea/sprepts/laus/laus.htm

The county with the largest growth for children age 0-19 will be Island (27%), followed by Snohomish (17.4%). The rate of growth for this age group is considerably less in King County (8.7%). Overall, this age group is forecasted to increase by 11.8% between 2000 and 2015.

Young adults in the age range of 20-34 years, who are typically first-time homebuyers, are forecasted to increase by 59.5% in Island County, 27.3% in Snohomish County and only 1.3% in King County, for an overall increase of 8.6%.

The number of adults aged 35-64 is expected to increase by 14.3% overall. The largest increase is expected in Snohomish County (23.4%), followed by Island County (22.2%) and King County (10.6%).

The age group of 65+ is forecasted to have the most significant population increase between 2000 and 2015. This age group is forecasted to increase by 86.2% in Island County, 95.6% in Snohomish County and 40.8% in King County. Overall, the area is expected to see a 55% increase in seniors aged 65+. The large increase in the number of seniors will clearly drive the housing market over the next decade. Housing of all types for seniors ranging from single family homes to rental and condominium apartments, as well as assisted living facilities will be required in the Seattle market area.

1.5 INCOME

The study entitled "Renovation in the United States; Market Overview and Contact Guide"[3] provided information from the National Association of the Remodelling Industry's report that found affluent Americans with salaries of over $100,000 spend more than $31 billion every year on renovating their homes. Even though they represent only 11% of all households, this is nearly a quarter of all expenditures. As a result, it is important to look at the income levels of the households in the Seattle Market Area to determine the percentage of households in this income range.

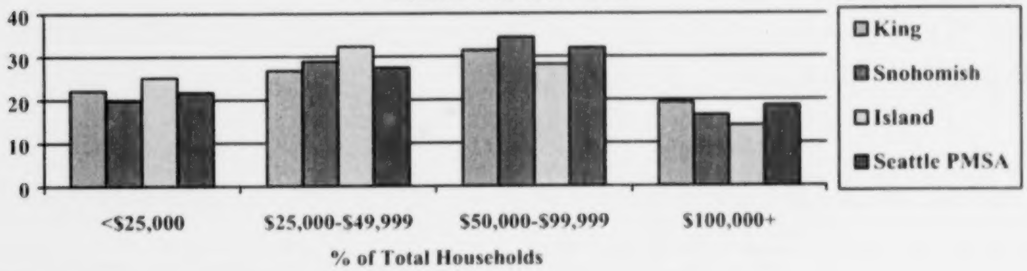
Figure 21

Income Groups by Households, Estimated for 2001, Seattle Market Area



Source: EASI Demographics, Inc., 2001

The data show that approximately 18.6% of the households in the Seattle Market Area have incomes of $100,000 or higher. As a result, it should be expected that these households would spend a significant amount of their income on home renovations. The county with the highest percentage of households with incomes of $100,000 or higher is King County (19.4%), followed by Snohomish (16.5%) and Island County (14.1%).

Income Groups by Households,
Estimated for 2006, Seattle Market Area

The above data show that the number of households in the lowest income level will decrease from 22.2% of the population to 21.6%. The percentage of households with incomes of $100,000 or higher also increases from 18.6% to 20.4%. Increases of ranging from 2.2% to 0.9% are expected in each County.

The median income for the State of Washington in 2000 was $41,715. Median household incomes in 2000 were $41,294 in Island County, $49,439 for Snohomish County and $51,300 for King County. The change in median household incomes for each county in the Seattle Market Area between for 1990 and 2000 are provided below.

Figure 23

Increase in Median Household Income,
Seattle Market Area, 1990-2000

In 2000 the highest household incomes in the Seattle Market Area were found in King County. Island County had the lowest household income in the area. Between 1990 and 2000 the largest increase in household income was seen in King County (40.8%), followed by Island County (39.1%) and Snohomish County (33.1%).

The forecasted median incomes for each county in the Seattle market area for 2006 are shown below.

Forecasted Median Incomes for 2006, Seattle Market Area

Median incomes are expected to grow by an average of 4.5% over the next 6years. The expected growth rates in median income are shown below.

Figure 25

Median incomes are expected to remain the highest in King County. Between 2000 and 2006 Island County is expected to see the highest increase in median household incomes.

2.0 ECONOMY

2.1 GROSS STATE PRODUCT AND ECONOMIC HEALTH OF THE SEATTLE AREA

The State of Washington's share of the nation's Gross Domestic Product for 1999 was 2.2%, up from 2.1% in 1992. For the period from 1992 to 1999, Washington State ranked 13th in percent change in total Gross Domestic Product[4]. Between 1992 and 1999, there was growth in all sectors. The smallest increases were seen in agriculture (1.6%) and government (1.5%). The largest increases were seen in services (7.6%), wholesale trade (6.4%), retail trade (6.4%), and transportation/public utilities (6.2%). Construction saw an increase of 2.3% over this period.

The change in the Gross State Product between 1994 and 1999 is shown below.

In addition to the above, the events of September 11th, 2001 will have an impact on the economy of the Seattle Market Area. The Meyers Group, in their statement dated September 20th [5], provided information on their assessment of the events of September 11th to the overall economy of the US. In this report, they compared the economy at the start of the Gulf War in 1990 to the economic conditions prior to September 11th. Their forecast states "a recession will occur because we were dangerously close to a recession prior to the disaster, and now there will be significant layoffs in the travel and tourism industries, as well as curtailed consumer spending as we head into the holiday season". They continued with their analysis of employment rates, stating, "the housing market is not likely to be significantly affected by low employment…(until) unemployment approaches 6.5%…sometime next year. They do not forecast a 'significant crash' in the housing market", which is good news to Canadian exporters of home construction materials.

The Meyers Group's report did, however, identify a number of markets where they expected "significant short-term job losses to hurt housing demand … and to possibly even result in distress sales in the resale market if conditions do not improve within one year. Markets such as Chicago, Boston, New York, Las Vegas and San Francisco are markets that are highly sensitive at this time." However, the Seattle market area was not included in this list of markets that could experience a decline in housing demand.

2.2 EMPLOYMENT

The Seattle Market Area has seen a decrease in the labour force in every county between November 2000 and November 2001, with the largest decrease (0.95%) in King County.

This information must be interpreted alongside employment growth and unemployment rates. The employment growth and unemployment rates for the Seattle Market Area are shown below. These figures show that between 1990 and 2000, the highest employment growth rates have been in Snohomish County. These figures also show that overall, the rate of employment growth in the Seattle Market Area was much higher between 1995 and 2000 (14.8%) than between 1990 and 1995 (5.2%).

There is relatively little variation in unemployment rates throughout the Seattle Market Area. The highest unemployment rates can be found in Snohomish County. In November 2000 the lowest unemployment rates were found in King County. In November 2001 the lowest unemployment rates were found in Island County. Unemployment rates for the Seattle PMSA dropped from 5.5% in 1995 to 3.5% in November 2000 and rose again to 6.0% in November 2001.

As shown above, unemployment increased in all counties between November 2000 and November 2001. The largest increase in the unemployment was seen in Snohomish County.

The forecasted employment growth rates from 1998-2008, based on industry projections for the Seattle Market Area are shown below. Again, due to the events of September 11th, 2001, and their expected impacts on the economy, the numbers shown in these projections may not be attained.

The overall forecasted employment growth for the Seattle Market Area is 10.0%, with the most significant growth in King County.

2.3 MAIN SECTOR OF EMPLOYMENT AND EMPLOYERS

To put the information reported for the Seattle Market Area into perspective, we have provided the following overview of the Construction Sector for the State of Washington as of 1997.

Table 1
Overview of the Construction Sector, State of Washington, 1997

Construction Sector Area	Number of Businesses	Number of Employees	Annual Payroll (000's)	Shipments/ Sales/Receipts (000's)

Washington State's Employment Security Department, Labour Market and Economic Analysis Branch provides information on employment by sector. This report projects an overall increase in employment of 19.8%, or an average of 2% annually between 1998 and 2008

The data shows that growth is expected in all sectors. The largest sector in terms of employment and employment growth is services, which includes schools, hospitals and medical services, restaurants and hotels. Between 1998 and 2008, 56% of the new jobs in the area are forecasted to be in service industries. Construction ranks 8th out of the 8 sectors, with employment expected to grow by approximately 9.5%, or 5,200 jobs. Manufacturing is expected to see a small increase in jobs, at only 1.4%.

Within the sectors outlined in the above table, the report identifies sectors that are predicted to see increases and losses. In the Seattle Market Area the sectors that are expected to see the greatest employment gains between 1998 and 2008 include: the manufacturing of electronic and electrical equipment; heavy construction; restaurants; business services; computer and data analysis; health care and educational services. Sectors that are forecasted to see the greatest losses include: manufacturing of transportation equipment, particularly aircraft parts; manufacturing of durable goods such as lumber and wood products, and manufacturing of non-durable goods such as petroleum, coal and plastics.

Because manufacturing makes up a large component of the economy for both King and Snohomish Counties, it is expected that these counties will undergo the highest rates of decline due to the current economic state. In addition, the events of September 11th, 2001 will have a direct impact on some of these employers, particularly those in the insurance and airlines business.

The employers in the Seattle Market Area with 2,000 or more employees are shown below, along with their major product or service.

We are also providing the list of top employers in each county in the tables below.

2.4 COST OF LIVING

The change in the cost of living over the past 10 years for the Seattle CMSA (an area larger than the identified Seattle Market Area) is shown below. The Consumer Price Index rose by 17.4% between 1991 to 1996, and by 17.9% between 1996 and 2001.

2.5 STRENGTHS AND WEAKNESSES OF THE LOCAL ECONOMY

As previously discussed, manufacturing of certain durable and non-durable goods is expected to decline over the next few years, but other durable goods manufacturing is expected to continue to show growth. The strengths and weaknesses of the local economy in the Seattle Market Area are as follows:

Table 8
Fastest and Slowest Growing Sectors, Seattle Market Area, 1989-1999

County	Fastest Growing Sectors 1989-1999	Slowest Growing Sectors 1989-1999
Island	State and Local Government	Military

Source: http://www.bea.doc.gov/bea/regional/bearfacts/bf10/17/b1017063.htm

When the above list is compared to the list of top employers for each county, only a few of the firms ranked in the "slowest growing sectors" appear: The Boeing Company (with a total employment of 98,440 in the Puget Sound area) and NAS Whidbey in Island (9,800 employees). The events of September 11th, 2001 will likely have an impact upon the military sector, but the effect of the increased military action will not be known for some time. In addition, although Finance, Insurance and Real Estate was noted as one of the faster growing sectors for Snohomish County, the losses experienced September 11th, 2001 will impact these firms as well.

Island County accounted for only 3.1% of the building permits in the Seattle Market Area in 2000. King County also had largest share of permits issued for all dwelling types. In 2000, 50.7% of the single-family homes in the area were built in King County, compared to 43.2% in Snohomish and 6.1% in Island County. Slightly more two family structures were built in King County (48.8%) compared to Snohomish County (47.9%). Permits issued for 3& 4 family homes which would typically be for tri-plex or quad-plex units, were most commonly issued in King County (84.2%) with 23.5% in Snohomish County and 2.7% in Island County. Building permits issued for 5+ family homes, which would include apartments and condominiums, were also primarily issued in King County (76.5%), with 23.5% in Snohomish County.

The percentage of units built by housing type in 2000 by county is shown below. The figure for % of Market shows the percentage of units of that housing type built in the county compared to the total Seattle Market Area. For example, 6.1% of the total single-family homes were built in Island County in 2000, compared to 3.3% of the 2 family homes (semi-detached).

Overall, the value of building permits increased by 6% between 1999 and 2000. The value of single-family homes increased in all three counties with the largest increase in King County (13.2%). The value of 2 family homes saw an overall increase of 6.0%, although there was a 22.6% decrease in the cost of construction of this type of unit in Island County. An overall decrease of 9.4% was seen in the value of building permits issued for 3 & 4 family homes over this period. This decrease was most predominant in Snohomish County which saw a 29% decrease in the cost of this type of unit. For structures housing 5 or more families, the overall value of building permits issued declined by 0.1%, despite an 11% increase in Snohomish County.

3.2 VACANCY RATES OF RENTAL HOUSING

As shown above, rental vacancy rates have declined in King and Snohomish Counties, but risen in Island County. The decline in King County is especially significant, as the number of renter households in this county is 40.2% of all households.

3.3 RESALE HOUSING PRICES

Single-family homes showed a shorter number of days on the market in King County in February 2002 than condominium units, at 55 and 63 days respectively. In Snohomish County the reverse was seen, with condominium units having an average of 50 days on the market compared to 59 days for single-family homes. In February 2002, the condominium market made up 23% of the resale market for King County, and 15% of the resale market for Snohomish County.

The Washington State Information Network released their Real Estate News on March 6, 2002[6] for the February 2002 period. This article states indicates that although the number of pending sales in February 2002 was somewhat lower than for the year before, the market is "surprisingly resilient"[7]. There were a number of factors contributing to the strong market, including low interest rates, a variety of homes available in all price ranges, and mild weather.

APPENDIX THREE: KEY CONTACTS IN THE SEATTLE AREA

The following are key contacts to help penetrate the Seattle market area. These are organized as follows:

- Distributors, Manufacturer's Representatives, Product Dealers, Wholesalers
- Builders, Developers, Contractors and Owners
- Associations
- Websites

Although we have not listed architects in this report, there are times when these professionals directly influence the purchase of materials for a project. We did contact the Washington Council of the American Institute of Architects, and found that they have over 5,000 members who are either architects or interns. The Seattle chapter has over 1,700 members. If you decide that you would like to directly market to architects, you should begin by contacting the AIA Washington, a Council of the American Institute of Architects at (360) 664-1388, or fax (360) 664-2551, or the Seattle Chapter at (206) 448-4938, or fax (206) 448-2562. These organizations would be able to provide you with directions on how to obtain a list of architects.
